

Sunday rugby cash guide for

Ganey calling me Leslie Kurtz

Hunslet

of Hunslet scattered following development, only a team of exceptional attraction can hope to do much gate-pulling.

With little likelihood of such a team being provided, in the near future at any rate, Hunslet have to struggle along — hoping for the best and recruiting from the amateur game.

If the Parkside ground is sold, and if the Rugby League agree to Hunslet continuing on another ground, the club would be financially in a position to buy and, possibly, able to get together a combination

THERE were no more resolute fighters against Sunday football than Hunslet, but they had to capitulate. Last Sunday's home match with Swinton will be followed by three more Sunday engagements — two away, at Doncaster and Bradford, and the third at home to Hull K.R.

The crowd for the Swinton game and that for the visit of Hull K.R. may give some guide on whether there is anything financially beneficial to Hunslet in Sunday fixtures.

Quite bluntly, what is needed is a new team — or the better part of one. Nor will just a good team do. As things stand, with Leeds United's ground so near at hand and with the former population of much which would enable them to pay their way more or less on gates.

Unless and until that time the most that can appear, be expected is to see like Don Watson and Mike Williams, the forwards signed from Cutyske amateur club and played at York.

Another newcomer is a Wingman, a 26-year-old Australian (ft. 11in. and 13½ st.), who was picked to make his debut against Swinton. Eddie Kurtz, in England on a working holiday, is to marry an English girl and settle down here.

Hunslet have re-arranged their visit to Hull K.R., postponed on August 20, for November 3.

LESLIE TEMPLETT

1971